Activities-

1. After reading All Aboard a True Train Story, have your students visit the Durango train website, www.durangotrain.com, to learn more about the train and the town in which it originates. From the site your students can access the Colorado Railroad Museum at www.crrm.org.
2. Use the description of the train whistle at the end of the story to create a listening and physical movement activity. Discuss with your students the importance of the whistle and the different means for short and long blows. Then ask your students to pretend they are trains by playing Train Red Light, Green Light. Use the following formula (based on the true meaning of the train whistle):
 - two long whistles- go
 - two long and one short whistle- slow
 - one short whistle- stop
 - three short whistles- back up
